

Noor Amanullah is a co-founder of Connecting with Humanity and a member of the social media, outreach, and communications committees. She is an experienced youth leader and digital content creator, skilled in podcast creation, content writing, and social media strategy. Through Connecting with Humanity, Noor hopes to continue encouraging youth initiatives and exploring political and cultural issues.

Noor studies Political Science and Public Policy at Rutgers University, where she is a Douglass student and is involved with the Center for Youth Political Participation at the Eagleton Institute of Politics. Noor hopes to pursue a career in public policy and education and is especially interested in creating opportunities for youth development and civic engagement.